DAY
1

Tea and Gardens in the High Atlas

Welcome to the Kingdom of Morocco, a country rich in history, culture, and beauty. Meet your guides at your pre-night hotel in Marrakech or at the airport, then take an hour and a half transfer into the foothills of Mount Toubkal. There, we'll be welcomed with traditional mint tea followed by lunch in a garden amidst the Atlas Mountains. After a bike fitting and safety briefing, head out on our first ride in the High Atlas, sharing the road with donkeys as we climb from one valley to another. Pause to admire the panoramic scenery, then relish the exhilarating, seven-mile descent to our home for the next three nights: a luxurious kasbah with breathtaking accommodations and sweeping mountain views. This evening, toast to a fantastic week ahead over dinner prepared with ingredients from the hotel's organic garden.

2

The Golden Foothills

Wake to sunrise bathing the Atlas Mountains in morning light and enjoy the warm glow during breakfast on the hotel's terrace. Today's ride takes us towards the foothills for a gradual climb with progressively more awe-inspiring views of the valley. This fertile region is crisscrossed by trails connecting Berber villages where we're sure to encounter shepherds, villagers, and school children in our travels. A well-deserved lunch awaits at a table beneath a tent surrounded by glorious, fragrant gardens. Afterwards, we'll pedal to a local co-op farm for a closer look at Moroccan argan oil, a plant-based beauty elixir as golden as this morning's light. From here, finish riding back to the hotel for some pampering at the spa, a game of tennis, or a little extra time to relax before we regroup for dinner—a bountiful repast of delicious Moroccan salads.

Meals: Breakfast / Lunch / Dinner

Destinations: Sidi Fares, Tahanout, Asni

Accomplished: 29 miles / 46 km, elevation gain: 3,143 feet / 958 meters

3

Hiking Toubkal

Leave the bikes behind and take a short transfer into the foothills of Morocco's famous Toubkal Mountain. At 4,167 meters, majestic Toubkal is the highest peak in North Africa and a popular destination for mountain climbers. We won't be trying to summit, but the scenery on today's four-hour hike is no less remarkable: follow a meandering river trail to a picturesque village at the mountain's base, then enjoy a traditional Berber lunch at our friend Mohammad's house. Afterwards, we'll make our way back to Imlil. The markets in this village—overflowing with hand-crafted tapestries, linens, leather, and pottery—are a wonderful place to hone our shopping skills before we hit the medina in Marrakech later this week. Back at the hotel, wind down with a stroll through the manicured gardens, sundowner in hand.

4

Magic of the Red City

Our last breakfast at Tamadot offers a taste of ripe and exotic fruits—some of which you'll recognize as we pedal through a tapestry of almond, cherry, and olive trees. Throughout the seasons, families (and their donkeys) travel along these farm roads tending and harvesting the orchards. After our morning ride, we'll trade bicycles for camels and set off through the desert for a taste of the nomadic lifestyle. Back on the bikes, continue cycling through Moulay Brahim, a town named for a Moroccan Sufi saint, and arrive in lakefront Lalla Takerkoust for lunch. This afternoon, transfer to Marrakech and get settled into your luxury riad. Indulge in the time-honored ritual of a Moroccan hammam or browse the city's bustling bazaars for a special souvenir—perhaps a clay tagine, a silver teapot, or a box of traditional, honey-soaked pastry. As the day draws to a close, savor the city's culinary delights and enjoy dinner at your leisure. Our guides will gladly share their recommendations.

Meals: Breakfast / Lunch

Destinations: Moulay Brahim, Lalla Takerkoust, Marrakech

Accomplished: 28 miles / 45 km, elevation gain: 1,804 feet / 550 meters

Accommodations: La Maison Arabe or Le Farnatchi

5

Cooking and Culture in Marrakech

After a traditional breakfast of fruit, dates, juices, and freshly baked breads, it's time to join our private chef for a hands-on morning of Moroccan cuisine. The adventure begins with a trip to the souks to practice our bargaining skills and select fresh ingredients. Then, we'll roll up our sleeves and prepare a variety of dishes that showcase the produce, fruits, and spices of North Africa, savoring our creations during lunch. Spend the afternoon exploring Marrakech with Mohammad, a talented local guide who brings the city's culture and heritage to life, weaving stories as intricate as the Berber rugs for sale in its souks. Marvel at the beauty of Islamic and Moroccan architecture at Dar el Bacha, admire jewel-toned textiles displayed in market stalls, and visit Ben Youssef Madrasa, a 14th-century Islamic college. Tonight, a horse-drawn carriage takes us on an enchanting jaunt through the Mellah, Marrakech's historic Jewish quarter, and on to the vibrant Jemaa-el-Fnaa square, where we'll enjoy a sumptuous farewell dinner and toast to an unforgettable week.
